THE administration bond bill, which was to authorize the sale of $500,000,000 50 year gold bonds, was defeated in the House by a vote- of 134 to 161. Czar Reed was so incensed at the defeat of room and sulked, while the republicans le't without a leader, voted any and every way, a majority of them voting against the bill, while the populists presented a solid front against it and 97 democrats did likewise. Of the Kentucky delegation, Stone, Caruth, Montgomery, Berry and Beckner voted for it, and Etlis, Goodnight, McCreary, Breckinridge and Adams against it. Finding that he could no longer depend on the body to do anything to relieve the financial situation, which has become critical, the pres ident sent a message to Congress announcing that enough 30 year 4 per cent bonds will be issued to bring the present gold reserve up to $100,000,000, and that arrangements for the disposition of the bonds have been made. He thinks that $62,400,000 will be sufficient to create and maintain the $100,000,000 gold reserve-He also says that he believes this action will tend, as far as any can, under the present circumstances to insure the maintenance of the parity in value of the coins of the two metals and the equal power of every dollar at all times in themarkets and in the pryment of Since the issue of the message it is an-

The premium on the bonds makes the interest on them that the weather there is delightful and 34 per cent. and produces an annual loss of $539,159 or about $16,000,000 on the batch of bonds. The present Congress foreign service under civil service rules doesn't seem to care either for the public credit, or for saving the money already in the treasury.

THE weather, which is always a fruitful theme of discussion, has been acting so outrageously all over the country that it has monopolized conversation and filled the newspapers with record breaking instances of frigidity. In Kentucky, which is buried many inches beneath a winding sheet of snow, the mercury has in the Northern and Western States it Mississippi, was burned. The loss is went simply out of sight. The Ohio river is frozen from its source to the Mississippi, which is also closed many miles South. The James river at Richmond is frozen from shore to shore and for four $2 each. days no trains passed north or south. Suffering everywhere has been intense, but more particularly in the so-called sunny South, where they are not prepared for such a sudden transition to North Pole coldness. In Georgia, South Corolina and Alabama the mercury has been very close to zero, while at a place in Louisiana it is said to have reached that point. In flowery Florida snow fell for the first time on record and there was a general freeze all over the State. It is said that 95 per cent. of the orange trees have been killed; the early vegetables, berries and pine apples are also ruined and the loss is estimated in that State alone at $10,000,000. A great many people are reported frozen to death, and the end does not yet appear in sight. It is awful to contemplate the misery and suffering being felt from one end of this broad country to the other.

A WOMAN OF TODAY.

WHY SHE HAS ENTERED THE RANKS OF LABOR.

Countess Norraikow Defends the Modern Woman-Her Hard Battle-A Significant Innovation-Conditions Which Must Be

tion. The new woman marks an innovation in the feminine world more significant than mankind is able to realize. It is not fair to deride this fin de siecle product, for circumstances have made her what she is. It is customary for men in high places to tell her that "her proper sphere is the home;" that her highest aim in life is a bountiful reproduction of the race, and that to the monotonous rock of the cradle and the never ending stitch of the needle must all her high and holy ambitions be sacrificed. In other words, they tell us she should become a household machine, an automaton to supply the family needs, with never a thought of the indwelling soul that requires but the touch of the magic wand of love to waken it into life, that soul which, when aroused, responds to humanity's needs as the soul of man never can.

But it is irony of the cruelest kind to talk or even to think of woman in such a restricted light. Tracing down through past ages, what do we find? What does history reveal to us? That many great and gifted beings have always existed who were acknowledged as such, and across whose fair foreheads the legend "woman" was written. It is not the past, however, with which we have to deal, but the living present, with its endless perplexities and struggles.

If home is the place where alone woman should shine, might I ask how many of the earnest, thoughtful workers of the current era have homes? Are not the majority already struggling for the barest existence-often, too, with others dependent on their exertions?

It is unnatural to suppose that woman enters the ranks of laborers merely to gratify a passing whim or to exploit some special fad. Moreover, in this age of progress and advanced thought, why should she be relegated to the rear rank in the march of progression? Conditions, both social and economic, have forced her into the competitive arena, and once there she has learned to make the most of her opportunity. It would indeed be strange if it were not so, for allied to a keenly analytic mind woman to a peculiar degree possesses enduring patience.

It is true that women, as a class, are impulsive, but it is impulse born of intuition. The same might be said in regard to our methods of reasoning. The mind of woman achieves results through different processes from those of the mind of man. He, it seems, must reach a conclusion by slow logic, while she intuitively obtains a like result with a bound and often without knowing exactly how. Thus, while man's actions are governed solely by sluggish reason, those of woman are largely due to quick intuition.

The new woman has had a hard battle to fight, for in most instances she has been greatly misunderstood. She is generally regarded by conservatives among her own sex and most of the male contingent as a pushing, aggressive creature devoid of all those divine as something on toll, as quite often the qualities which constitute female lov- grinding is done when the weather is ableness. This is a mistaken attribute with which to endow the new woman, If a farmer or dairyman keeps and feeds for she oftentimes-in fact, it is the rule as he should ten head of stock, he can -turns out to be the daintiest bit of afford to have a mill. With this numfemininity imaginable. A positive will allied to earnest effort does not necessarily indicate a large, masculine, forbidding looking woman.

Is woman, then, to be blamed for conditions over which she has no control? It is the cause which should be probed to the root, not the effect alone which should be censured and derided. Our greatest men have invariably risen from small beginnings, and why should not equal success attend the footsteps of the new woman? She is a glorious creature, endowed with all the gifts of the gods. What, then, is to retard her progress? Always the ruler of the household, she has by her present action merely widen. ed the sphere of her usefulness. Into the in battle array, prepared to live or die by the result of the contest. COLTS' TEETH.

Like Children's Teeth, They Give Trouble When They Come and Go.

Dr. E. P. Niles, in bulletin No. 36, Virginia agricultural experiment station, says: In the colt the incisor and first three molars on each jaw are always temporary and replaced by permanent teeth some time during the animal's life. The last three molars are always permanent and are never replaced. The teeth make their appearance as follows: The two middle incisors and the first three molars make their appearance before or some days after birth, the first laterals four to six weeks after birth, second laterals, or corner teeth, six to nine months after birth, the fourth molar (first permanent one) is cut at from 10 to 12 months of age. At 21/2 years the middle incisors and the first and second molars are replaced. At the same time the fifth molar is cut. At 31/4 the first lateral incisors and the third molar are replaced. At 41/4 the corner teeth are replaced, and the sixth molar is cut. In case of a male the canine teeth are also replaced at 41%.

Dentition in young colts is sometimes accompanied by very unfavorable symptoms. The most serious trouble arising from faulty dentition in young colts is indigestion with diarrhea. In this tronble both the molar and incisor teeth may be at fault. If the molars alone give rise to the trouble, the cause of the diarrhea may be overlooked, but upon a careful examination of the mouth the gums will be seen to be swollen, inflamed and painful to the touch. Should the incisors also be involved the colt will refuse to take its nourishment, owing to the painful condition of the gums covering the teeth, which have not at this time made their appearance through them. If the gums are freely lanced, the unfavorable symptoms soon pass away, and the colt is restored to its normal health. Diarrhea, however, is not constant in these cases. The writer has often been called in in cases when the only symptom present was the refusal of the colt to suckle, which it did in a vigorous manner after the lancing of the gums over the incisor teeth.

We have stated that the replacement of the temporary teeth begins at 21% years of age and continues until 416 or years of age. During this time there Siftings. is frequently more or less cough, which is known as "dental cough," due to the irritation of the mucous membrane of the teething process.
